A COLORADO HORROR.

The Most Awful Catastrophe in the History of the State.

Occurs at the C. C. & I. Co.'s Mine at Crested Butte.

Nearly Sixty Men Killed by the Explosion of Fire Damp.

Terrible Calamity.

DENVER, January 24:—The Times Gunnison special says: At 8 a. m. a terrible explosion from fire damp took place in the Colorado Coal & Iron company's mine at Crested Butte. Sixty-two men were in the mine, five of whom were rescued. One has died since and the others are seriously burned. Up to this hour, 3.30 p. m., there have been no more taken out. It is impossible to enter the mine on account of the foul air and there is hardly a possibility of saving any of the remaining 57. The shock was heard for half a mile. The miners at the Anthracite Mesa mine are assisting in the rescue. This catastrophe is the most appalling that ever occurred in any mines in this country. The mayor of Gunnison and citizens are offering all the help in their power. Drs. Rockafellow and Cockrell have gone to the scene of the disaster by special train.

GUNNISON, January 24, 7 p. m.—At half-past seven o'clock this morning a terrible explosion took place in the coal mine belonging to the Colorado Coal and Iron company at Crested Butte, a coal mining town thirty miles north of here. The news reached this city at 9 o'clock and a News-Democrat reporter was at once sent to the scene of the disaster. The reporter has just returned and reports as follows: The cause of the explosion is not yet definitely known, but is supposed to be from fire damp. The explosion occurred either in chamber "1" or "2" just half an hour after the day force of sixty-seven men had gone to work. There were ten at work in chamber "4" and these escaped unhurt, except one man, John Angus, who was in the passage way just outside chamber 4. He is badly burned about the face and body, but will recover. Fifty-seven men were at work in chambers 1 and 2 and these are all thought to have been killed. The explosion was of such force as to block up the entry. The fan near the main entrance was badly injured and about 25 feet of the roof of the tramway in front of the main entrance was blown down by the force of the explosion.

The men at work on the Anthracite Mesa mine, the night force of the C. C. & I. Co. and citizens generally have been working hard all day to rescue the men in the mine, although it is thought that none can escape alive. As soon as possible the fan was repaired and put to work pumping air into the mine and men set at work with a will removing the obstructions so as to reach the chambers where the fifty-seven men are, and hope to get the bodies out to-night.

The following are names of fifty-five of the unfortunates. The other two could not be learned. Henry Anderson, John Williams, M. J. Stewart, John Martin, Thomas Rogers, James O'Neil, Jacob Laux, John Anderson, James Walsh, Peter Baker, William Davidson, Richard James, David Hughes, P. McManus, W. T. King, John Creelman, John Hular, Thomas Williams, John Shun, Pat Barrett, John McGregor, John Myers, F. W. Smith, G. B. Nicholson, William Marony, Nick Probst, Thos. Laffey, John Price, Jas. Driscoll, James Coughlin, Henry Stewart, B. Heffron, L. P. Heffron, W. L. Jones, John Donnelly, Carl Lodenwald, Chas. Sterling, Thomas Roberts, Jim McCourt, Fred Becht, Iber King, Jos. Weisenberg, H. Donegan, Joseph Kranst; all miners.

The drivers are Jas. F. Stewart, jr., Wm. Neath, Morgan Neath, Thomas Glancy, John Rutherford, Wm. McCowitt, A. M. Godfrey, Dan. McDonald, Wm. Aubrey, Ben. Jefferies and Thos. Stewart. Many of these are married men and leave families, but at this writing everything is in such confusion that it is impossible to give details.

A special train went from Gunnison at 2 o'clock this afternoon with doctors and a number of citizens anxious to offer what aid they could. The whole town of Crested Butte is in mourning and crowds of women cluster about the mine entrance, weeping and wringing their hands. It is reported that at the time of the explosion there were ten kegs of black powder in chambers 1 and 2, where the explosion is supposed to have taken place. The mine has three miles of drifting and it is therefore difficult to locate the accident exactly until the rescuing parties can gain admittance.

DENVER, January 25, 1 a. m.—Latest reports from Crested Butte state that there are no new developments. Everything possible is being done to reach the bodies as soon as possible. The gas is so bad in the mine and the passage ways are so blockaded as to make it very slow work. The scene at the mine is a most pitiful one. Wives and children of the buried men still hover around the entrance, while their lamentations add to the distressing scenes. It will probably be near morning before the searchers will be able to able to reach chamber No. 2, where the bodies are likely to be found.

Struck a Boulder.

DENVER, January 24.—A Times Gunnison special says: The west-bound freight train on the Denver & Rio Grande railroad one mile west of Sapanero struck a boulder on the track at daybreak this morning, killing the engineer, George Hutchinson, and seriously, but not dangerously, injuring the fireman, Frank K. Martinez.

Leadville's Broken Bank.

LEADVILLE, January 24.—L. P. Langford, western bank examiner, arrived this morning and took possession of the First National bank. He was accompanied by L. C. Ellsworth, of Denver, papers for whose appointment as receiver were dispatched from Washington to-day.

At the Columbus Wreck.

FALMOUTH, Mass., January 24.—Divers who visited the wreck of the City of Columbus to-day report all the works of the vessel gone. Not a single state room is remaining. On the deck even the heavy rods used as stays between the houses on the port and starboard sides were bent and torn from their places, while the deck itself was broken and open. The heavy timbers lay in various shapes beneath the broken surface of the deck, preventing the divers going into the hold. No bodies were seen by the divers. No attempt was made to find bodies in the steerage, the only descent for the divers being in the after part of the vessel. To-night a terrible gale is blowing across the sound and vast quantities of wreckage is coming ashore at Falmouth. It is expected bodies will come ashore to-night. Seafaring men say bodies now in the water on the wreck, if not recovered in a day or two, will be completely devoured by sand eels.

A Northern Blizzard.

ST. PAUL, January 24.—Reports from the northwest show snow and high wind. The country around Grand Forks was visited by a terrible blizzard. It is not thought there will be much loss of life, as the weather has been so cold that nobody ventured on the prairies where the blizzard means certain death. Railroads report much trouble from drifting snow. At Duluth this morning was 31 below and at Cumberland 36 below; Superior Junction 44 below. The wind is rising here and beginning to snow. The railroads report a blizzard coming this way.

QUEBEC, January 24.—Snow has again blocked the Quebec Central railway. Drifts are twenty feet deep.

The Dutch Expedition in Achin.

LONDON, January 24.—The Dutch expedition sent to the relief of the captured crew of the British steamer Nizro, wrecked on the east coast of Sumatra, comprised a battalion of infantry under a military commander. The Achin expedition landed at Tenom. The rajah there, whose tribe looted the wreck, held the crew of twenty-five men, including one American prisoner, and refusing all propositions to ransom. Land and naval forces bombarded and burned the rajah's capital. The resistance of the natives was desperate. The Dutch forces fought well and captured two strongholds of the rajah by assault, but lost several officers and men wounded. The crew, if alive, are still prisoners.

Judge Drummond to Retire.

CHICAGO, January 24.—It is stated on reliable authority that United States circuit judge, Thomas Drummond, will retire from the bench about next March. At the close of February, this year, Drummond will have completed his thirty-fourth year on the federal bench. This service entitles him, under the recent retiring act of congress, to full pay for the balance of his natural life. It was the judge's intention to take action in the matter some days ago but the unexpected withdrawal of Judge McCrary from the circuit bench caused Drummond to delay from a desire not to embarrass the president with two vacancies at the same time. Drummond is one of the oldest judges in the United States.

A Fortunate Escape.

NEW YORK, January 24.—The coping and top of the rear wall of the Hebrew free school on East Broadway fell this morning on the roof of an extension two stories below, in which 50 pupils, ranging from three to seven years, were in session. It crushed through a skylight into the class room, throwing the pupils into a wild fright and injuring several slightly. Their screams aroused the neighbors and frantic mothers rushed in clamoring for their children. The teachers did their best to stay the panic, but yielded before the rush of mothers, each of whom seized her child and carried it away. For a time great excitement prevailed. One teacher was injured on the head and five or six children cut and bruised; none seriously.

England's Weakness.

LONDON, January 24.—Samuel W. Baker, who commanded the first expedition for the suppression of the slave trade in Central Africa under the auspices of Ishmael Pasha, former khedive, says: "General Gordon and myself recently agreed thoroughly upon the course now forced upon the English ministry by events in Egypt. I fear it is now too late to fulfill the programme, which would have saved much misery and bloodshed had it been adopted two months ago. Our cowardly abandonment of the Soudan has encouraged disloyalty and has broken the spirit both of officers and troops. The ministry's conduct in Egyptian affairs is a national humiliation."

Marine Disasters.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., January 24.—Three schooners of the Gloucester fishing fleet are given up for lost, with crews of forty-six men. One schooner, it is believed, was run down by an ocean steamer.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., January 24. The schooner Jeannie was driven out of Ming's Bright in the ice on the 4th inst. There are no tidings of the vessel. It is supposed the crew are starved or frozen to death.

A Street Duel.

LOUISVILLE, January 24.—The Courier-Journal's Auburn, Ky., special contains an account of a tragedy at that point in which Harry Bronson and George Hardison were killed by each other in a street fight. The killing had its origin in a whisky family feud dating back sixteen years, when a farmer, Hardison, the father of George, killed Bronson's father with a broad-axe. Both belong to wealthy families. More trouble is expected.

Gossip About Tariff Intentions of House Democrats.

Proceedings in Congress---Washington Jottings.

The Tariff.

WASHINGTON, January 24.—There is a manifest disposition on the part of the minority in the house to keep their mouths closed on the tariff question, and, as a leading western representative said to night, "let the democrats take the initiatory steps in this matter." Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois republicans conversed with echoed this sentiment, and it was agreed that no good could result to their party by an agitation of protection or free trade. It would be time enough to give their views when the question was raised in the house, and then there would be no trouble for the republicans to array themselves on the right side. Conferences had been held with the leaders of the minority in the house, and they had fully agreed that this course was the better one. Consequently it was not likely that the republicans on the ways and means committee would advance any tariff ideas till the majority had made their intentions known. Both sides thus far have been very quiet on the subject of the tariff, but it is probable that the calm will be succeeded by a storm in the course of a week or two.

Homestead and Pre-Emption.

WASHINGTON, January 24.—A bill was introduced in the house yesterday by Mr. Strait, of Minnesota, to meet the objections to the pre-emption law and render its entire repeal unnecessary. He thinks the bill will meet with general favor, and that it contains such restrictions as will insure its passage through congress. If passed it would allow a man who has exhausted his right under the homestead law to take a claim under the pre-emption law. "There are," Major Strait says, "a great many men who have under adverse circumstances lost their homestead claims. They may have been sold out under mortgage, and desire to move further west to begin anew. The bill gives this class of men only under such circumstances the right to take a claim under the pre-emption law. There is also a clause in the bill allowing a man who has made reasonable improvements to be off his claim from the 15th of March to the 15th of April, and such absence shall not be taken as an intention on his part to abandon his claim. We know in the early settlement it is difficult for a man to get himself in a condition the first year to remain on his claim during the winter. There may be no school advantages near his claim, and for the sake of his family he may desire to move into some village where they can have the benefit of schools in the winter, and then move upon his claim in the spring, but he must show a sufficient amount of improvements to satisfy the department of his good intention before he can be allowed to be off his claim during the winter.

Postal Affairs.

WASHINGTON, January 24.—The postmaster general was in consultation with the senate committee on postoffices and post roads this morning in relation to the use of the mails by lottery companies. A sub-committee consisting of Senators Sawyer, Wilson and Jackson was appointed to consider the matter at greater length and to take further counsel with the postmaster general. Informal opinions of a member of the committee lead to the belief that they favor exclusion from the mails of newspapers containing lottery advertisements and withholding money orders and registered letters addressed to lottery companies. The committee ordered a favorable report on the house bill making public highways post-roads. The committee decided to devote the next regular meeting to the consideration of the postal telegraph bill. Norvin Green, president of the Western Union Telegraph company, will be present.

Douglass Married.

WASHINGTON, January 24.—Fred Douglass, the well known colored leader, was married in this city this evening to Miss Helen M. Pitts, a white woman formerly of Avon, New York. The ceremony, which took place at the house of Dr. Grimke of the Presbyterian church, was private, only two witnesses being present. The first wife of Douglass, who was colored, died about a year ago. The woman he married to-day is about thirty-five years of age and was employed as copyist in his office while he was marshal of the district. Douglass himself is about seventy-three years of age and has daughters as old as his present wife.

Washington Notes.

Nominations—Peter French, of Colorado, collector of customs at Alaska.

Senator Ingalls says he is not a candidate for the position on the bench caused by the resignation of Judge McCrary.

The secretary of the navy has received a cable message from Minister Hunt at St. Petersburg, announcing the departure of Lieutenant Harber from Moscow with the remains of De Long and party.

Argument was concluded yesterday in the supreme court on the petition for habeas corpus in the cases of Georgia kuklux. Solicitor General Phillips appeared for the government and argued that the United States courts had full jurisdiction of the cases.

A sub-committee of the house committee on agriculture agreed to report with two amendments a bill prepared by the cattle breeders' committee for the extirpation of diseases of domestic animals. The appropriation determined upon is $250,000 instead of $500,000, and states will be required to contribute a sum equal to that apportioned among them by the general government. The report will be submitted to the entire committee.

XLVIII Congress

HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, January 24.—Willcox reported a bill granting right of way through the Indian territory to the Gulf, Colorado & Santa Fe railroad. Committee of the whole.

The house went into committee of the whole on the bill making appropriations for paying rebate tax on tobacco and payment of expenses of the New Mexico legislature.

White of Kentucky moved to reduce the rebate appropriation to $750,000. The reduction in the tax on tobacco had not, he claimed, been any benefit to the farmer. The money for rebate would be paid into the hands of clients of the late commissioner of internal revenue, under whose recommendation the republican house passed the bill which was responsible for this enormity.

Randall said the rebate came from reduction of taxation on tobacco of every description.

White it was only a reduction of one half.

Randall—You introduce a bill for the other half. I will vote for it.

White said the bill last year was passed to please manufacturers and the commissioner who recommended it resigned his position and acted as a lobbyist, claim agent and log roller for men whose claims would be paid by this bill.

The committee rose and reported the bill without amendment. It passed; yeas 270, nays 1—White of Kentucky.

The bill appropriates $3,750,000 for rebate on tobacco and $31,995 for payment of expenses of the legislature of New Mexico.

On motion of Randall the house non-concurred in the senate bill providing for the relief of the Greeley party.

Matson introduced a joint resolution authorizing the secretary of the interior to detail a clerk of his department to act as assistant clerk of the committee on pensions and invalid pensions.

Belford objected to this peanut manner of conducting business. He contended if assistant clerks were necessary they should be provided for out of the contingent fund. He thought every member ought to be provided with a clerk at the public expense. Every day he had a hundred letters to answer and it took his entire salary to pay clerk hire. If he had not an independent income he would either be a pauper or out of this house.

The joint resolution passed.

Adjourned.

SENATE.

Hale reported favorably the house joint resolution for the relief of the Greeley expedition. The senate voted down all attempts to limit the expenses of the expedition. After agreeing to an amendment providing to form the relief party of volunteers the joint resolution was agreed to.

Jones of Nevada reported with amendment a resolution in relation to clerks for senators. The amendment is that clerks shall be appointed only for the session at six dollars a day. The resolution so amended was adopted.

Morgan of the committee on foreign relations reported adversely a joint resolution abrogating the Hawaiian treaty. The resolution now goes on the calendar.

Sherman presented a minority report on the same subject. Ordered printed.

Hill of the committee on postoffices and post-roads reported favorably a bill making all public roads post routes. Calendar.

Bills were introduced: By Sherman for the preservation of woods and forests of the national domain adjacent to navigable rivers and their affluents. This is the bill presented by the same senator at the first session of the 47th congress.

Miller, of New York—To authorize the president to pay the Chinese government the fund now under control of the secretary of state of the United States known as the Chinese indemnity fund. It was a bill, Miller said, in keeping with the Chinese indemnity bill passed by congress. This money had been given by China for the express purpose of liquidating certain specific claims. Those claims have been liquidated and a large balance is left, which undoubtedly belongs to China and ought to be returned. Referred to the foreign relations committee.

In consideration of the bill providing a government for Alaska the debate was participated in by Harrison, Plumb, Vest, Frye, Jones of Florida, Hoar, Van Wyck and Morgan. The clause prohibiting the importation, manufacture or sale of liquors gave debate a little liveliness. As the clause stood it prohibited liquors for any purpose. Plumb and Frye favored that form.

Vest opposed any rule for Alaska that did not apply to other territories. Whatever views he held about prohibition he thought it would not do to exclude the medicinal use of liquor in a country where the thermometer frequently indicated a temperature of 50 below zero. He was not hypocrite enough to thank God to vote for a bill with such a sweeping clause.

Harrison defended the bill.

A motion was agreed to excepting from the prohibitory clause, liquor needed for medicinal and scientific purposes. On the clause relating to compensation of the marshal of the territory, which the bill provides shall be partly by salary and partly by fees, Van Wyck moved amendment by providing that all fees shall be paid into the treasury. This was a good place to begin the work of paying United States marshals exclusively by salary, for the greatest outrage had been committed on innocent people by the cupidity of men dressed in a little brief authority, who lived by fees. Honest settlers who had to cut a stick of wood for fuel had been dragged from their homes under the pretense that they had committed crime in order that the marshal might be able to charge fees for his service for arresting. The same thing happened under the internal revenue laws. The people of the country are feeling outraged at this course and process of law is being brought into contempt.

Van Wyck's amendment was agreed to.

The senate, 28 to 24, refused to adjourn till Monday. After executive session adjourned.

South Park Restrained.

DENVER, January 24.—The district court of Summit county has issued an injunction against the Denver & South Park road to restrain it from building its road from Buena Vista to Leadville. The injunction was issued on motion of E. O. Wolcott, the attorney of the Denver & Rio Grande road. Sheriff Graham served the injunction this morning on Superintendent Egbert.

Union Pacific Meeting.

NEW YORK, January 24.—At the annual meeting of the Union Pacific directors to-day a regular quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent. was declared from earnings without impairment of surplus. A statement of earnings upon which the last dividend was declared shows that for the quarter the gross earnings were $5,766,621; operating expenses and taxes, $3,683,739; surplus left after paying dividend, $542,585. Notwithstanding the general depression in business the surplus of the road for November was $1,782 over the same month of '82. The company continue their complaint to the government against the decision of the courts, which applies not only the earnings of the main line for government service, but the earnings for government service of the whole system, branches and feeding lines included, to the payment of the government.

The government directors are not informed of action taken in the investigation that was to be made into the effect of the construction or purchase by the Central Pacific of competing lines of through roads, but it seems to them not unworthy of their consideration as affecting the present condition of the road and their ultimate ability to meet their obligations to the government.

The original land grant to the Union Pacific embraced about 11,200,000 acres granted to the Kansas Pacific, and to the Denver Pacific about 7,024,000 acres, making a total of 18,224,000 acres to the consolidated company. The policy of granting lands, and granting them too on a grand and liberal scale, has been more than justified by the history of the road and the states and territories traveled by it. The Pacific road has been the means of more rapid development of the country's resources than was possible twenty years ago for the imagination to conceive. The directors are able to say concerning the administration of this property that they have every reason to believe it has been prudent and wise. Of the original grant to the Union Pacific 8,857,893 acres are unsold, and of the grant to the Kansas and Denver Pacific companies 5,230,725 acres remain. There have been sold and disposed of in round numbers of the whole land grant about 4,000,000 acres for about $15,500,000. Of the original Union Pacific issue of $10,400,000 worth of bonds it is understood some $5,800,000 has been cancelled by proceeds of sales. The estimated value of the company's unsold lands is $17,500,000. The directors say some definite plan should be adopted whereby the interest of the government and the company should be mutually subserved and provision made for such fair and equitable division of the remaining lands as shall best promote their speedy sale and utilization. Net proceeds of sale of lands: Union Pacific grant, $3,923,321 up to June 30, '83; and of the K. P. and D. P. grants $5,997,868.

A communication from President Dillon deals with various matters now before the courts that relate to the Union Pacific company. It refers to pending suits by and against the Credit Mobilier. The only suits mentioned in which the integrity of the company's franchise is directly assailed are in the nature of quo warranto proceedings brought by Kansas, one against the Kansas Pacific seeking annullment of the entire franchise of that company, and another against the Union Pacific seeking to oust the company from the right to operate the Kansas Pacific under the terms of the consolidation. It is expected the supreme court of the United States will decide these cases at the present sitting.

Bonds issued in aid of the Union Pacific and Kansas Pacific, secured by second mortgage, fall due in 1895. They amount in principal and unpaid interest to nearly fifty million dollars. Unless some provision is made to refund this debt upon a satisfactory basis it is to be feared the company will not be able to meet its obligations and that disastrous complications may result. To avoid this it has been suggested that an actual computation of the net amount of those debts, principal and interest, at a certain day, say July 1st, '84, be made, and that this sum be divided into one hundred and twenty equal parts, the company to issue one hundred and twenty interest-bearing bonds payable one each six months until the whole debt is extinguished.

The directors repeat their expressions of confidence in the future of the road and its ultimate ability to meet all obligations to the government. They say the road-bed, track, buildings, and equipment of the road are all in excellent condition and are kept well up to the highest standard of the best roads in the country. The feeding lines are bringing each year additional traffic to the main line and increased profits from their own business, all to the permanent advantage of the whole system.

Western Pools.

CHICAGO, January 24.—Western railway managers, in an effort to form a pool covering trans-Missouri business, were in session all the forenoon but arrived at no conclusion on any of the real points at issue.

General passenger agents of Kansas City lines met to-day to consider the subject of forming a new agreement covering passenger traffic from Kansas City, the old agreement being rendered voidable by the recent withdrawal of the Burlington line. The Alton and Rock Island lines suggested a renewal of what will practically amount to the old agreement. Burlington refused to consider the proposition. Burlington insists that a new clause shall now be added, to the effect that no cut of any description in the passenger rate from Kansas City shall be made without the consent of every line signing the agreement. Before closing an agreement covering rates from Kansas City Burlington also demands that a similar agreement shall be entered into, covering rates from Chicago to Kansas City. Pending discussion on these propositions the conference adjourned until to-morrow.

The Markets.

NEW YORK, January 24.—Governments firm; state bonds steady; stocks strong and higher in early trading. Oregon Transportation and Northern Pacific preferred were ¼ to ⅜ lower in the first sales; but before 11 the market advanced ¼ to 3 per cent. After 11 the Northern Pacific preferred dropped to 40¾, common to 20¼, and Oregon Transportation to 10¾. The decline in other active shares was merely fractional and near 1 the market was strong again. Between 1 and 2 the list declined ¼ to 1. Near the close a much stronger feeling prevailed and under large purchases the best prices were made. As compared with last night's close prices are ¼ to 2 higher; Pacific ⅜, Reading ¼ and Jersey Central 1¼ per cent. lower. Approximate earnings of the Denver & Rio Grande railroad for the third week in January $112,000, an increase of $19,000 over the corresponding week of '83. Transactions 385,000.

Less activity in the mining market but prices were generally firm. Harlem was an exception and sold to some extent at 12 to 10. Bodie was weak at 7.00; Bulwer active, 1.50 to 2.00; Durean sold 20; Independent 40; Mono 1.25; Sutro Tunnel 16. The market continued quiet and steady in the afternoon. Bulwer sold at 1.00 to 2.00; Bodie 7.30; Standard 6.02½; Sonora 12; Climax 8; Iron Silver 1.05.

A Careless United States Marshal.

WASHINGTON, January 24.—A curious fact is reported by Examiner Ballin, of the department of justice, in connection with the examination of the accounts of the late United States Marshal Hall, of Western Pennsylvania. The discovery of the irregularity of his accounts was made by the attempt of one of Hall's deputies to blackmail the marshal. This deputy, it appears, saw the loose manner in which the marshal's business was being conducted, and investigated on his own hook enough to find out there was a considerable shortage. He then went to Mr. Hall and told him he had been spending the government's funds, and was short some $60,000. He said he had no desire to get Hall into trouble, and would say nothing about it if paid $10,000. This was the first knowledge the marshal had of his own shortage, and it is considered highly creditable to him as an honest man that he indignantly rejected the offer, saying in effect that if he had been spending government money he did not do it knowingly, and would not now begin by paying hush money. The deputy threatened, but Mr. Hall snapped his fingers at him. The result was the blackmailer immediately informed the department, and an examiner was sent to Pittsburg to investigate the case, which, as has been published, panned out a shortage of $150,000. Examiner Ballin says that Hall was very much affected by the discovery, and was, apparently, more astonished than anybody else. The matter so worked upon him that it was feared he might commit suicide, and a watch was set upon him to prevent any such unfortunate occurrence. He was, without knowing it, closely watched all summer because of this supposition, and it is yet feared that his reason may become so clouded as to prompt him to take his own life.

Fence Cutters Organizing.

GALVESTON, January 24.—A News' Austin special says: Reliable information from Montague county says fence cutters are organizing an offensive and defensive alliance and threaten to kill any county attorney who attempts to prosecute them for fence cutting under provisions of the new legislative enactment, and affairs in that locality are more serious than at any time since the commencement of that trouble.

A News' San Marcos special says: A man named McLane, an employe of a rich rancher in this vicinity, was murdered near town this evening by unknown persons, believed to be members of a fence cutter's organization.

Foreigners in Distress.

LONDON, January 24.—The annual banquet of the society for the aid of foreigners in distress was held to-day. The lord mayor presided. The French ambassador, the United States consul general, a majority of the foreign consuls and two hundred other persons were present. Sixteen thousand dollars was subscribed to the society's funds.

Mahone Asked to Resign.

RICHMOND, Va., January 24.—A resolution requesting General Mahone to resign his seat in the United States senate passed the senate 23 to 10; strict party vote. It now goes to the house of delegates.

Lieutenant Totten who spent last winter here is said to be writing a history of the Coreau war of 1874. He participated in the war.

From what is published concerning the habits of De Walt, the president of the First National bank of Leadville, the depositors almost deserved to lose their money by trusting him.

An American by the name of Schenck is in prison for murder in Vienna. It is in order for some patriotic congressman to introduce a resolution of enquiry. Or is not the German vote as well worth seeking as the Irish vote?

Had the First National bank of Leadville been organized under the old state bank system, the holders of all of its $50,000 circulation would have suffered. But these notes are secured by a deposit with the government and are perfectly good. Such an experience shows the superiority of the national banking system over that of the old state bank system and also shows the soundness of our currency. The thinking people of the country will not agree with Mr. Buckner, the chairman of the house committee on banking and currency, who will strive to abolish national bank circulation.

Judge Belford has a great deal to say about restoring "harmony" in the party, and has possibly convinced some trusting innocent constituents that he had some influence in national politics. This is what the Brooklyn Union thinks about it: "Belford is undoubtedly a great man out in Colorado, where his "red hair serves as a political oriflame, but "when his abounding assurance leads him to "assume oversight of the republican party in "the nation at large, he simply becomes ridiculous." It is humiliating to think that eastern people suppose that in the estimation of Colorado Belford is a great man.

Ex Speaker Keifer is a good deal hurt by his investigation. He created the impression that he was not telling the truth when before the committee. He said that the former stenographer resigned of his own accord on the 3d of last March and that then he appointed his nephew. Now it happens that this stenographer received a salary of $420 a month and his duties were practically over until the first Monday of last December. So that in resigning he waived a salary of $420 a month for nine months and for which he had no work to perform. Under these circumstances he was not likely to resign voluntarily until December 1st. When Mr Keifer said that he did resign of his own accord there was a broad smile. Mr Keifer's nephew managed to draw about $3,800 with practically no work. Mr Keifer should be investigated and bear the odium he deserves.

Mr James Bryce, M P, who has been in this country since last summer studying our institutions has returned home. He was interviewed on landing at Liverpool and expressed freely his opinion of America. He thinks the United States is in no danger from socialism because property is too widely distributed. This will greatly surprise some Englishmen who take great pride in not knowing anything their fathers did not know. It was long England's pet theory that socialism would some time break up the American union. They called our institutions pernicious because they affirmed that they were breeding the most dangerous socialist doctrines. They said our liberty would soon be little more than license, that our separation of church and state was encouraging infidelity and irreligion. But now instead of dangers predicted becoming real, one of England's most distinguished historical students says that we are in less danger from socialism than any other civilized country. Next to the test to our institutions given by the civil war, this is perhaps the highest vindication our institutions have received. The menace to all established governments to-day is socialism in its various forms. It is yet uncertain how far it will endanger all European governments, including that of England. In England to day the land question is uppermost in the minds of the people. But in this country we are secure and are not compelled to muzzle the socialist press or leaders like Herr Most and Swinton.

Senator Williams, who leads the senatorial contest in Kentucky, gives the following views on civil service reform:

"How many votes do you think a democrat would get if he went back to his state and said that he had voted for a measure that would keep democrats out of office, and would keep republicans in? He would not get a vote and he would not deserve to. The only reform that is possible is a total change of men and measures—a change from top to bottom. Let them all go. They have been in long enough. There is nothing on earth that corrupts men like the possession of power. It is nonsense—the whole thing. The elections were not so much a democratic victory as they were a republican defeat. The people are not in love with the democrats and they are disgusted with the republicans. The democrats will come into power, if they are prudent, in 1884. We must not put obstructions in the way of cleaning out the whole thing. I am for a clean sweep. I am for house-cleaning from garret to cellar: I am for cleaning out the old rats in the treasury, who know where the choice cheeses are and where the best hiding places are. The water must be turned on and the democratic president must take a big broom and clean the whole platter."

This is by no means a bad pure democratic opinion. The contest in Ohio resulting in the election of Mr. Payne shows it is also the democratic Ohio idea. It shows the democratic party has not been sincere in its professions in favor of civil service reform. Its platforms have endorsed it only to get the independent vote. There is no excuse for being taken in by more such platforms. Senator Williams says that there must be a clean sweep and speaks particularly of the treasury. This shows the extreme of partisan feeling. No business man conducting a vast business like that of the treasury department would dare to change his entire force. Such a change on its face would be bad for the business of the government. The democracy are confident of success and want the offices which is the only explanation of the sudden set back civil service has received in its ranks.

Charles Dickens once received a check for £1,000 from Holloway, the pill man which was placed at the author's disposal on condition that one line of complimentary reference to Holloway's cures should appear in the book which Dickens was then publishing in monthly numbers. Dickens sent the check back by the messenger who brought it without any answer at all.

President Salomon of the republic of Hayti is described by one who saw him recently to be "a massive broad shouldered giant, at least six feet six inches high with the physical proportions of a gladiator, a profile dark as the 'Night's Plutonian shore,' with snow white locks keen, restless eyes glittering like diamonds in a setting of jet high forehead, and a form despite his advanced age, erect as a pillar of stone."

The Orleans Princes in the Union Army

McClellan in February Century

In August 1861, the two brothers, accompanied by the Prince de Joinville, sailed for New York. Toward the close of September they arrived in Washington, and the young princes at once received authority from the president to enter the army as aides de-camp, being permitted to serve without taking the oath of allegiance, and without pay. It was also understood that they should be permitted to leave the service should family or political exigencies require it. They were borne on the army register as Louis Philippe d'Orleans and Robert d'Orleans, additional aides de camp in the regular army, with the rank of captain, and were assigned to the staff of the major general commanding the army of the Potomac. The Prince de Joinville accepted no rank, and simply accompanied head quarters, on the invitation of the general commanding, as an amateur and friend. The position held by these "young gentlemen"—as the Prince de Joinville always designated them—was not free from difficulties. Princes who might at any time be called upon to assume their places in the government of great nation, yet serving in the army of a republic whose cause was not regarded with very friendly eyes by the existing government of their own country they had many contradictions to reconcile, many embarrassments to overcome. Connected with family ties with so many of the royal families of Europe, always received by them as of royal rank, the elder regarded by so many in France as the rightful heir to the throne, they could never lose sight of the dignity of their position, while it was at the same time necessary for them to perform their duties in a subordinate grade, and to win the confidence and friendship of their new comrades, who were sure to weigh men by their personal qualities and abilities not by their social position across the Atlantic. Their task was accomplished with complete success, for they gained the full confidence, respect and regard of their commander and their comrades. From the moment they entered the service they were called upon to perform precisely the same duties and in precisely the same manner as their companions on the personal staff of their commander.

"Soon after the beginning of the peninsular campaign, the princes were strongly urged by their friends at home to return at once to England partly to receive the large numbers of their adherents expected to attend the exhibition of 1862, and partly because the French expedition to Mexico had greatly strained the relations between this country and France. They persisted in remaining with the army until the close of the seven days, and left only when assured that the immediate resumption of the attack on Richmond was improbable.

Salvini on Lear's Infirmities

February Century

Of Lear's infirmities he says: "But let us now regard him from an artistic point of view considered merely as a personage of the stage. If he is to be discovered to the audience as a puny little dotard, paralytic, asthmatic and infirm, senile and feeble at his first entrance, what room is left for contrast. He has far more claim to sympathy as a man who, happy at the outset, feels keenly the bitterness of misfortune, than as one, who inured to suffering, only undergoes it in new forms. The first commands respect because he battles courageously with the unforeseen calamities of life, the second, powerless to resist them, is a pitiable object, and can but arouse a wish for quick-coming death to put him out of pain. Finally, the first is interesting and pathetic, the second, tedious and painful and this latter effect must inevitably be produced upon the spectator (as numerous examples prove) by the representations of the past that follow the beaten track and are based upon the pernicious system of imitation, imitation all too recent, since what we are told of the great American artist, Edwin Forrest proves that this invention of a weak and doting Lear was assuredly not his—not his, whose ringing tones and thrilling gestures, whose majestic presence and heroic conceptions won for him a name that is deservedly remembered and honored.

"Some actors choose to make Lear an imbecile; this is a mistake; others would have him a demoniac, but this also is a misconception. To me it seems that his mind is warped by a sense of ingratitude in nature, and that this feeling grows upon him with the persecution of the warring elements, till at the degradation of man revealed in Edgar's counterfeiting it becomes all absorbing. And, in deed all those scenes of malediction, of metaphor and of self dissection, with their profound conclusions, their scraps of wisdom and philosophy, do but turn upon this very concentration of thought that has for its root ingratitude. Were it not so, the mere sight of Cordelia would not so speedily bring back his reason. An imbecile is far more difficult to cure than a madman, and a madman cannot be restored by so simple a remedy. His unsoundness is but that of a monomaniac who recovers his normal health when Cordelia's tenderness soothes the troubled spirit and supplies the healing balm of reverent, filial love."

Sheridan at West Point

"A vacancy occurring at West Point when he was seventeen, Sheridan applied to the member of congress from his district for the appointment. The answer inclosed his warrant as cadet, and directed him to report at West Point June 1, 1848. He brushed up his spelling and grammar, and passed his preliminary examinations without trouble. When he entered the academy he knew nothing of algebra, geometry or any of the higher branches of study. But Cadet Henry W Slocum, since major general of volunteers and member of congress from New York, was his room mate. Slocum was an industrious, hard working student, and from him Sheridan derived much assistance, especially in the solution of knotty points of algebra. The two boys were very much in earnest, and after taps, when the lights were put out and every cadet was expected to remain in bed, Slocum and Sheridan were in the habit of hanging a blanket over the window, and then lighting their lamp and pursuing their studies. At the first examination Slocum went up toward the head of the class, and Sheridan stood several files higher than he had expected with his disadvantages.

In 1852, in his graduating year, he had some trouble of a belligerent sort with another cadet, which resulted in his suspension. He thought at the time the punishment was unjust, but riper experience convinced him that the authorities were right and he was wrong. He was suspended for a year, after which he joined the class of 1853, and in this he was graduated.

Artists' Fees

Belgravia

I notice that artists' fees in 1829 at private concerts were rather more moderate than they have since become. De Beriot took £5, Moscheles gave Mori £5. A leading violinist will now take from £10 to £20 and Sarasate lately would not play under £50. Patti at one time took £30. Moscheles himself, who played in addition to engaging the artists, took £40 for two concerts at the Rothschilds. Pisaroni sang in private for £20 a night. Mme Stockhausen received £35 for two nights. At this time Liszt was making £500 a month by his public performances, and Paganini refused £100 to play at Lablache's benefit. The great basso had to give him a third of the whole receipts! In my time I know that Rubenstein has made £12 000 in one year in America, and refused a bribe of £15,000 for nine months more.

The necessity for prompt and efficient household remedies is daily growing more imperative, and of these Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the chief in merit and the most popular. Irregularity of the stomach and bowels malarial fevers liver complaint debility rheumatism and minor ailments are thoroughly conquered by this incomparable family restorative and medicinal safeguard and it is justly regarded as the purest and most comprehensive remedy of its class. College Notes

President Penney will probably leave for the east within two or three weeks.

The English literature class are now reading Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream."

The meeting of the musical association which was to have been held next Thursday evening has been postponed one week.

Professors Sheldon and Strieby have sufficiently recovered from their recent illness to be able to resume their accustomed duties.

A challenge was sent to the Crowell Foot Ball team some time ago but no answer has as yet been received from them. The college boys are very anxious to play another game with the Crowells, if satisfactory arrangements can be made.

The committee appointed by the fire department to examine the condition of the fire apparatus in the building, reported at a meeting of the department on Monday that they had done so, and that they found it in good order. They also reported upon the necessity of taking some measures to increase its efficiency. The report was accepted by the department.

The Occidental club had a very interesting and instructive meeting last Friday evening. The attendance was quite large, only ten members being absent. The minutes of the two previous meetings were read, and after four or five corrections were approved. The literary programme was then rendered, and it is safe to say that it was above the average of those generally conducted in literary societies. Only three performers on the programme failed to render their exercises. Two musical selections which were not on the programme were exceedingly well rendered, and they met with enthusiastic applause. One of the selections was an imitation of the "Babbling Brook," and the other was a solo entitled "No Sir," which fully merited the applause it received. The reading was very entertaining and instructive. The subject was especially suitable for the occasion. It was "The origin of roast pig." The reading was finely delivered and enthusiastically applauded. The essay was very good and was rendered in a creditable manner. The debate upon the necessity of a property qualification for suffrage was the feature of the programme. The chief disputants handled the subject in such an intelligent and earnest manner that it was evident to all that they had spent a great amount of time in the preparation of their arguments. The negative was awarded the honors of the debate. The three great arguments by which he utterly annihilated the statements of his opponent were: First, we should not have a property qualification for voting because we cannot compel a man to hold property; second, if we should have a property qualification, it would disfranchise the best majority of our people who are non property holders; third, there are two thirds of our population, who are non-property holders, that would be disfranchised if a property qualification was necessary for voting. In the general debate the question was discussed from moral, political and sentimental standpoints. Altogether the debate was the best that the society has enjoyed for some time. The critic's report was very flattering to the performers, especially so in regard to the essayist and soloist. In the business session nothing of importance was transacted. The newly elected president presided with a grace and dignity that fittingly became his high position. His decisions were very impartial, and were rendered in strict accordance with parliamentary rules. They were received without a word of dissatisfaction on the part of the house. The Occidental club has indeed a great future before it.

Irish Guerrillas.

CINCINNATI, January 24.—The Commercial-Gazette will publish to-morrow an open letter from John Byrne, vice president of the Irish National League of America, to Patrick Ford, editor of the Irish World, taking strong exceptions to Ford's call for an emergency fund to be subject to his judgment alone without accountability, for the purpose of waging war with England. Mr. Byrne claims that such a course as this fund implies would be regarded by all civilized nations as guerrilla warfare, revolting to the belligerent uses of the age, and they will be bound from self-interest to assist England in crushing it. He protests against allowing Ford and Rossa and that class to fix a standard by which ninety-five per cent of Irishmen and Irish politicians shall be measured. Mr. Byrne closes by saying that he believes he can rely on a majority of the Irish element in America, including business and professional classes, to support this declaration.

Highwaymen Captured

MINNEAPOLIS, January 24.—Three of the footpads who have been waylaying and robbing citizens were captured this afternoon. Last night they raided a saloon with drawn revolvers and forced the proprietor to give up his watch and money. The matter was reported to the police to-day, which led to the arrest. Their names are John Smith, alias "Black Jack," Jimmy Edwards and John Jenkins. These men have been identified by other parties recently assaulted and robbed.

Now Resigns

INDIANAPOLIS, January 24.—Hon. John Now arrived to night from Washington. Before leaving the capital he tendered his resignation as assistant secretary of the treasury, which will be handed to President Arthur on his return from New York. It is stated the resignation is final. Now's reason for his resignation is urgent pressure of private business.

China Prepared

HANOI, January 24.—The French made a reconnoissance in strong force in the direction of Bacninh. They found the enemy strongly posted at the junction of the Red and Black rivers. The enemy's fire was harmless. The French anticipated a desperate resistance to their assault on Bacninh.

Gordon in Egypt.

CAIRO, January 24.—General Gordon arrived this afternoon and had a conference with the British minister. The Egyptian ministry have sent a circular to the powers participating in the international tribunal, proposing the reassembling of the judicial reform commission.

CROCKETT'S DIGNITY.

How the Noted Backwoodsman Scored a Success for Etiquette and Decorum.

New York Sun.

Although Crockett was at first not adverse to the notoriety which his eccentricities achieved for him, he gradually grew ashamed of them, and would gladly have been less at variance with his comparatively polished surroundings. On one occasion, when he had accepted an invitation to a large public dinner at which many notables were to be present, he sought Judge Bowen, an official of distinction, who knew him well and liked him.

"Judge," he said, "I understand that you are to be present at the big feed this evening."

"Certainly, Mr. Crockett. Pretty much everybody will be at the dinner, I believe."

"Well, judge," said Crockett, a little shyly, "I want to ask a favor of you. Will you do me the honor to observe me narrowly all through the repast?"

"Why, of course, if you wish it, Mr. Crockett," said the judge, anticipating some fresh oddity or uncouthness. "But what for?"

"Never mind at present, judge; I'll let you know afterward," said Crockett. "And, by the by, give the wink to some friends you can trust—gentlemen of eminence and distinction, like yourself, you know—so that they may observe me likewise. But mind you, judge, they must be eminent men—men of bang-up names. Will you do all this for me, judge?"

The judge renewed his promise with much heartiness. The dinner came off accordingly. But those who had been on the outlook for some fresh breach of etiquette on the part of the untutored congressman were doomed to disappointment, though the event was, perhaps, none the less amusing. It soon became evident that, instead of seeking to attract attention he was earnestly endeavoring to avoid it. From the outset he made superhuman efforts to attain the well-bred decorum that ruled around him, and with a very commendable degree of success. He studied the manners of his neighbors in disposing of their viands and wines with the keenness of a trapper on an indistinct trail in the starlight, and imitated them with the automaton-like assiduity of a Chinese tailor's apprentice. His child-like painstaking was equally pathetic and ludicrous. But, as has been said, he achieved a fair degree of success. Course succeeded course without evolving a perceptible blunder. He even sipped his wine gently instead of engulfing it thirstily. The temptations of the dessert were successfully resisted. The toasts were drunk sparingly. At last, to the wonder of all and the disappointment of many, the dinner was at an end without the notorious Mr. Crockett's having behaved a single oddity or vulgarism whatever, original or otherwise.

The next day Crockett again called on Judge Bowen in his office, with a mixture of hope, anxiety and suspense in his manner. "Judge," said he, "did you and your friends observe me closely at the big dinner, as I requested?"

The judge had divined the rough diamond's praiseworthy aspirations and fully sympathized with them. "Yes, Mr. Crockett, we did," he replied, "and, sir, we were both astonished and overjoyed. 'Mr. Crockett must have been masquerading up to this time,' we said to ourselves, 'for it is evident that he is, after all, a fine gentleman, who now suddenly casts aside the backwoods' character he has thus far seen fit to maintain.'"

"Great God! are you in earnest, judge?" exclaimed Crockett, his breath almost taken away. "Did I really behave decent, then?"

"Decently, sir!" reiterated the judge. "That doesn't express it, sir. You conducted yourself throughout with a dignity and polish as to the manner born!"

Crockett gave a whoop. "Put that down in writing, judge!" he exclaimed. "Draw it up in reg'lar black and white, as they do resolutions, sayin' just how I behaved at that big dinner. Then sign it, and have those eminent friends of yours sign it too. 'I want it as proof that I kin be a gentleman under pressure, judge—that I ain't always the unfledged ripsnorter they've mostly credited me with bein'. Will you judge?"

"I will, and with the utmost pleasure, Mr. Crockett," replied Judge Bowen, with difficulty controlling himself despite the drollery of the situation. "Call to-morrow, and I will have the document duly drawn up and signed."

Greatly elated, Crockett called on the following day, and got the coveted document. The contents were everything he could desire, and appended to it were a dozen or more distinguished signatures. For a long time afterwards he was very fond of exhibiting the paper, especially to such ladies at whose houses he imagined he had most glaringly misconducted himself. He also, upon his return to Tennessee, displayed it with great pride to many of his constituents, and the paper became known as "the Hon. David Crockett's credentials."

STATE OF COLORADO, } ss
County of El Paso. }

In the county court of said county, in the state of Colorado.

Mary B. Morley, Plaintiff, Against
Joseph F. Morley, Defendant.
The People of the State of Colorado send Greeting.

To Joseph F. Morley, defendant, above named. You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named plaintiff in the county court of the county of El Paso, state of Colorado, and to answer the complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after service on you of this summons, if served within this county; or if served out of this county, but in this district, within twenty days; otherwise within forty days; or judgment by default will be taken against you, according to the prayer of the complaint.

The said action is brought to procure a decree of this court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, on the ground that on or about the first day of January, 1883, defendant, without any reasonable cause, deserted and abandoned plaintiff, and still continues to desert and abandon plaintiff and to live separate and apart from her, without her consent and against her will, as will more fully appear by the complaint on file herein, to which reference is here made.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

Given under my hand and the seal of the county court of the county of El Paso, state of Colorado, at Colorado Springs, this 8th day of January, A. D. 1884. EDWARD P. WRIGHT,

Lieutenant Totten who spent last winter here is said to be writing a history of the Colorado war of 1862 He participated in the war

From what is published concerning the habits of De Walt, the president of the First National bank of Leadville, the depositors almost deserved to lose their money by trusting him

An American by the name of Schenck is in prison for murder in Vienna It is in order for some patriotic congressman to introduce a resolution of enquiry. Or is not the German vote as well worth seeking as the Irish vote?

Had the First National bank of Leadville been organized under the old state bank system, the holders of all of its $50,000 circulation would have suffered. But these notes are secured by a deposit with the government and are perfectly good. Such an experience shows the superiority of the national banking system over that of the old state bank system and also shows the soundness of our currency The thinking people of the country will not agree with Mr. Buckner, the chairman of the house committee on banking and currency, who will strive to abolish national bank circulation

Judge Belford has a great deal to say about restoring "harmony" in the party, and has possibly convinced some trusting innocent constituents that he had some influence in national politics This is what the Brooklyn Union thinks about it "Belford is undoubtedly a great man out in Colorado, where his "red hair serves as a political oriflame, but "when his abounding assurance leads him to "assume oversight of the republican party in "the nation at large, he simply becomes ridiculous" It is humiliating to think that eastern people suppose that in the estimation of Colorado Belford is a great man

Ex Speaker Keifer is a good deal hurt by his investigation He created the impression that he was not telling the truth when before the committee He said that the former stenographer resigned of his own accord on the 3d of last March and that then he appointed his nephew Now it happens that this stenographer received a salary of $420 a month and his duties were practically over until the first Monday of last December So that in resigning he waived a salary of $420 a month for nine months and for which he had no work to perform Under these circumstances he was not likely to resign voluntarily until December 1st. When Mr Keifer said that he did resign of his own accord, there was a broad smile Mr. Keifer's nephew managed to draw about $3,800 with practically no work Mr Keifer should be investigated and bear the odium he deserves

Mr James Bryce, M P, who has been in this country since last summer studying our institutions, has returned home He was interviewed on landing at Liverpool and expressed freely his opinion of America He thinks the United States is in no danger from socialism, because property is too widely distributed This will greatly surprise some Englishmen who take great pride in not knowing anything their fathers did not know. It was long England's pet theory that socialism would some time break up the American union They called our institutions pernicious because they affirmed that they were breeding the most dangerous socialist doctrines They said our liberty would soon be little more than license, that our separation of church and state was encouraging infidelity and irreligion But now instead of dangers predicted becoming real, one of England's most distinguished historical students says that we are in less danger from socialism than any other civilized country. Next to the test to our institutions given by the civil war, this is perhaps the highest vindication our institutions have received The menace to all established governments to-day is socialism in its various forms. It is yet uncertain how far it will endanger all European governments, including that of England In England to day the land question is uppermost in the minds of the people But in this country we are secure and are not compelled to muzzle the socialist press or leaders like Herr Most and Swinton

Senator Williams, who leads the senatorial contest in Kentucky, gives the following views on civil service reform

"How many votes do you think a democrat would I get if he went back to his state and said that he had voted for a measure that would keep democrats out of office, and would keep republicans in? He would not get a vote, and he would not deserve to The only reform that is possible is a total change of men and measures—a change from top to bottom. Let them all go They have been in long enough. There is nothing on earth that corrupts men like the possession of power It is nonsense—the whole thing. The elections were not so much a democratic victory as they were a republican defeat. The people are not in love with the democrats and they are disgusted with the republicans The democrats will come into power, if they are prudent, in 1884. We must not put obstructions in the way of cleaning out the whole thing I am for a clean sweep I am for house cleaning from garret to cellar; I am for cleaning out the old rats in the treasury, who know where the choice places are, and where the best hiding places are The water must be turned on, and the democratic president must take a big broom and clear the whole platter

This is by no means a unique democratic opinion The contest in Ohio resulting in the election of M Payne shows it Is also the democratic Ohio idea It shows the democratic party has not been sincere in its professions in favor of civil service reform Its platforms have endorsed it only to get the independent vote There is no excuse for being taken in by mere such platforms Senator Williams says that there must be a clean sweep and speaks particularly of the treasury This shows the extreme of partisan feeling No business man conducting a vast business like that of the treasury department would dare to change his entire force Such a change on its face would be bad for the business of the government The democracy are confident of success and want the offices which is the only explanation of the sudden set back civil service has received in its ranks

President Salomon of the republic of Hayti is described by one who saw him recently to be "a massive, broad shouldered giant, at least six feet six inches high, with the physical proportions of a gladiator, a profile dark as the 'Night's Plutonian shore,' with snow white locks keen, restless eyes glittering like diamonds in a setting of jet high forehead, and a form despite his advanced age, erect as a pillar of stone'

The Orleans Princes in the Union Army

McClellan in February Century.

In August 1861, the two brothers, accompanied by the Prince de Joinville, sailed for New York Toward the close of September they arrived in Washington, and the young princes at once received authority from the president to enter the army as aides de-camp, being permitted to serve without taking the oath of allegiance, and without pay, it was also understood that they should be permitted to leave the service should family or political exigencies require it They were borne on the army register as Louis Philippe d Orleans and Robert d'Orleans, additional aides de camp in the regular army, with the rank of captain, and were assigned to the staff of the major general commanding the army of the Potomac The Prince de Joinville accepted no rank, and simply accompanied head quarters on the invitation of the general commanding, as an amateur and friend The position held by these 'young gentlemen'—as the Prince de Joinville always designated them—was not free from difficulties Princes who might at any time be called upon to assume their places in the government of great nation, yet serving in the army of a republic whose cause was not regarded with very friendly eyes by the existing government of their own country, they had many contradictions to reconcile, many embarrassments to overcome Connected with family ties with so many of the royal families of Europe, always received by them as of royal rank, the elder regarded by so many in France as the rightful heir to the throne, they could never lose sight of the dignity of their position, while it was at the same time necessary for them to perform their duties in a subordinate grade, and to win the confidence and friendship of their new comrades, who were sure to weigh men by their personal qualities and abilities not by their social position across the Atlantic Their task was accomplished with complete success, for they gained the full confidence, respect, and regard of their commander and their comrades From the moment they entered the service, they were called upon to perform precisely the same duties and in precisely the same manner as their companions on the personal staff of their commander.

"Soon after the beginning of the peninsular campaign, the princes were strongly urged by their friends at home to return at once to England, partly to receive the large numbers of their adherents expected to attend the exhibition of 1862, and partly because the French expedition to Mexico had greatly strained the relations between this country and France They persisted in remaining with the army until the close of the seven days, and left only when assured that the immediate resumption of the attack on Richmond was improbable'

Salvini on Lear's Infirmities

February Century

Of Lear's infirmities he says "But let us now regard him from an artistic point of view, considered merely as a personage of the stage If he is to be discovered to the audience as a puny little dotard, paralytic, asthmatic and infirm, senile and feeble at his first entrance, what room is left for contrast? He has far more claim to sympathy as a man who, happy at the outset, feels keenly the bitterness of misfortune, than as one, who inured to suffering, only undergoes it in new forms The first commands respect because he battles courageously with the unforeseen calamities of life, the second, powerless to resist them, is a pitiable object, and can but arouse a wish for quick-coming death to put him out of pain Finally, the first is interesting and pathetic the second, tedious and painful, and this latter effect must inevitably be produced upon the spectator (as numerous examples prove) by those representations of the part that follow the beaten track, and are based upon the pernicious system of imitation imitation all too recent, since what we are told of the great American artist, Edwin Forrest proves that this invention of a weak and doting Lear was assuredly not his—not his, whose ringing tones and thrilling gestures, whose majestic presence and heroic conceptions won for him a name that is deservedly remembered and honored

"Some actors choose to make Lear an imbecile, this is a mistake others would have him a demoniac, but this also is a misconception To me it seems that his mind is warped by a sense of ingratitude in nature, and that this feeling grows upon him with the persecution of the warring elements, till, at the degradation of man revealed in Edgar's counterfeiting it becomes all absorbing And, in deed, all those scenes of malediction of metaphor, and of self dissection, with their profound conclusions, their scraps of wisdom and philosophy, do but turn upon this very concentration of thought, that has for its root ingratitude Were it not so, the mere sight of Cordelia would not so speedily bring back his reason. An imbecile is far more difficult to cure than a madman, and a madman cannot be restored by so simple a remedy His unsoundness is but that of a monomaniac, who recovers his normal health when Cordelia's tenderness soothes the troubled spirit and supplies the healing balm of reverent, filial love

February Century

A vacancy occurring at West Point when he was seventeen, Sheridan applied to the member of congress from his district for the appointment The answer inclosed his warrant as cadet, and directed him to report at West Point June 1, 1848 He brushed up his spelling and grammar, and passed his preliminary examinations without trouble When he entered the academy he knew nothing of algebra, geometry or any of the higher branches of study But Cadet Henry W Slocum, since major general of volunteers and member of congress from New York, was his room mate Slocum was an industrious, hard working student, and from him Sheridan derived much assistance, especially in the solution of knotty points of algebra The two boys were very much in earnest, and after taps, when the lights were put out and every cadet was expected to remain in bed, Slocum and Sheridan were in the habit of hanging a blanket over the window, and then lighting their lamp and pursuing their studies. At the first examination Slocum went up toward the head of the class, and Sheridan stood several files higher than he had expected with his disadvantages

In 1852, in his graduating year, he had some trouble of a belligerent sort with another cadet, which resulted in his suspension He thought at the time the punishment was unjust, but riper experience convinced him that the authorities were right and he was wrong He was suspended for a year, after which he joined the class of 1853, and in this he was graduated

Belgravia

I notice that artists' fees in 1829 at private concerts were rather more moderate than they have since become Dr. Beriot took £5, Moscheles gave Mori £7 A leading violinist will now take from £10 to £20 and Sarasate lately would not play under £50 Patti at one time took £30 Moscheles himself, who played in addition to engaging the artists, took £40 for two concerts at the Rothschilds Pisaroni sang in private for £20 a night. Mme Stockhausen received £35 for two nights At this time Liszt was making £500 a month by his public performances, and Paganini refused £100 to play at Lablache's benefit The great basso had to give him a third of the whole receipts! In my time I know that Rubenstein has made £12,000 in one year in America, and refused a bribe of £15,000 for nine months more

The necessity for prompt and efficient household remedies is daily growing more imperative, and of these Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the chief in merit and the most popular. Irregularity of the stomach and bowels, malarial fevers liver complaint, debility, rheumatism and minor ailments are thoroughly conquered by this incomparable family restorative and medicinal safeguard, and it is justly regarded as the purest and most comprehensive remedy of its class For sale by all druggists and dealers generally. dw-g ly

DAILY GAZETTE.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 25, 1884

College Notes

President Tenney will probably leave for the east within two or three weeks.

The English literature class are now reading Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream."

The meeting of the musical association which was to have been held next Thursday evening has been postponed one week.

Professors Sheldon and Strieby have sufficiently recovered from their recent illness to be able to resume their accustomed duties.

A challenge was sent to the Crowell Foot Ball team some time ago but no answer has as yet been received from them. The college boys are very anxious to play another game with the Crowells, if satisfactory arrangements can be made.

The committee appointed by the fire department to examine the condition of the fire apparatus in the building, reported at a meeting of the department on Monday that they had done so, and that they found it in good order. They also reported upon the necessity of taking some measures to increase its efficiency. The report was accepted by the department.

The Occidental club had a very interesting and instructive meeting last Friday evening. The attendance was quite large, only ten members being absent. The minutes of the two previous meetings were read, and after four or five corrections were approved. The literary programme was then rendered, and it is safe to say that it was above the average of those generally conducted in literary societies. Only three performers on the programme failed to render their exercises. Two musical selections which were not on the programme were exceedingly well rendered, and they met with enthusiastic applause. One of the selections was an imitation of the "Babbling Brook," and the other was a solo entitled "No Sir," which fully merited the applause it received. The reading was very entertaining and instructive. The subject was especially suitable for the occasion. It was "The origin of roast pig." The reading was finely delivered and enthusiastically applauded. The essay was very good and was rendered in a creditable manner. The debate upon the necessity of a property qualification for suffrage was the feature of the programme. The chief disputants handled the subject in such an intelligent and earnest manner that it was evident to all that they had spent a great amount of time in the preparation of their arguments. The negative was awarded the honors of the debate. The three great arguments by which he utterly annihilated the statements of his opponent were: First, we should not have a property qualification for voting because we cannot compel a man to hold property; second, if we should have a property qualification, it would disfranchise the best majority of our people who are non-property holders; third, there are two thirds of our population, who are non-property holders, that would be disfranchised if a property qualification was necessary for voting. In the general debate the question was discussed from moral, political and sentimental standpoints. Altogether the debate was the best that the society has enjoyed for some time. The critic's report was very flattering to the performers, especially so in regard to the essayist and soloist. In the business session nothing of importance was transacted. The newly elected president presided with a grace and dignity that fittingly became his high position. His decisions were very impartial, and were rendered in strict accordance with parliamentary rules. They were received without a word of dissatisfaction on the part of the house. The Occidental club has indeed a great future before it.

The society programmes for this evening are as follows:

Irish Guerrillas.

CINCINNATI, January 24. The Commercial-Gazette will publish to-morrow an open letter from John Byrne, vice president of the Irish National League of America, to Patrick Ford, editor of the Irish World, taking strong exceptions to Ford's call for an emergency fund to be subject to his judgment alone without accountability, for the purpose of waging war with England. Mr. Byrne claims that such a course as this fund implies would be regarded by all civilized nations as guerrilla warfare, revolting to the belligerent uses of the age, and they will be bound from self-interest to assist England in crushing it. He protests against allowing Ford and Rossa and that class to fix a standard by which ninety-five per cent of Irishmen and Irish politicians shall be measured. Mr. Byrne closes by saying that he believes he can rely on a majority of the Irish element in America, including business and professional classes, to support this declaration.

Highwaymen Captured

MINNEAPOLIS, January 24.—Three of the footpads who have been waylaying and robbing citizens were captured this afternoon. Last night they raided a saloon with drawn revolvers and forced the proprietor to give up his watch and money. The matter was reported to the police to-day, which led to the arrest. Their names are John Smith, alias "Black Jack," Jimmy Edwards and John Jenkins. These men have been identified by other parties recently assaulted and robbed.

New Resigns

INDIANAPOLIS, January 24.—Hon. John New arrived to-night from Washington. Before leaving the capital he tendered his resignation as assistant secretary of the treasury, which will be handed to President Arthur on his return from New York. It is stated the resignation is final. New's reason for his resignation is urgent pressure of private business.

CROCKETT'S DIGNITY.

How the Noted Backwoodsman Scored a Success for Etiquette and Decorum.

New York Sun.

Although Crockett was at first not averse to the notoriety which his eccentricities achieved for him, he gradually grew ashamed of them, and would gladly have been less at variance with his comparatively polished surroundings. On one occasion, when he had accepted an invitation to a large public dinner at which many notables were to be present, he sought Judge Bowen, an official of distinction, who knew him well and liked him.

"Judge," he said, "I understand that you are to be present at the big feed this evening."

"Certainly, Mr. Crockett. Pretty much everybody will be at the dinner, I believe."

"Well, judge," said Crockett, a little shyly, "I want to ask a favor of you. Will you do me the honor to observe me narrowly all through the repast?"

"Why, of course, if you wish it, Mr. Crockett," said the judge, anticipating some fresh oddity or uncouthness. "But what for?"

"Never mind at present, judge; I'll let you know afterward," said Crockett. "And, by the by, give the wink to some friends you can trust—gentlemen of eminence and distinction, like yourself, you know so that they may observe me likewise. But mind you, judge, they must be eminent men—men of bang-up names. Will you do all this for me, judge?"

The judge renewed his promise with much heartiness. The dinner came off accordingly. But those who had been on the outlook for some fresh breach of etiquette on the part of the untutored congressman were doomed to disappointment, though the event was, perhaps, none the less amusing. It soon became evident that, instead of seeking to attract attention he was earnestly endeavoring to avoid it. From the outset he made superhuman efforts to attain the well-bred decorum that ruled around him, and with a very commendable degree of success. He studied the manners of his neighbors in disposing of their viands and wines with the keenness of a trapper on an indistinct trail in the starlight, and imitated them with the automaton-like assiduity of a Chinese tailor's apprentice. His child-like painstaking was equally pathetic and ludicrous. But, as has been said, he achieved a fair degree of success. Course succeeded course without evolving a perceptible blunder. He even sipped his wine gently instead of engulfing it thirstily. The temptations of the dessert were successfully resisted. The toasts were drunk sparingly. At last, to the wonder of all and the disappointment of many, the dinner was at an end without the notorious Mr. Crockett's having betrayed a single oddity or vulgarism whatever, original or otherwise.

The next day Crockett again called on Judge Bowen in his office, with a mixture of hope, anxiety and suspense in his manner. "Judge," said he, "did you and your friends observe me closely at the big dinner, as I requested?"

The judge had divined the rough diamond's praiseworthy aspirations and fully sympathized with them. "Yes, Mr. Crockett, we did," he replied, "and, sir, we were both astonished and overjoyed. 'Mr. Crockett must have been masquerading up to this time,' we said to ourselves, 'for it is evident that he is, after all, a fine gentleman, who now suddenly casts aside the backwoods' character he has thus far seen fit to maintain.'"

"Great God! are you in earnest, judge?" exclaimed Crockett, his breath almost taken away. "Did I really behave decent, then?"

"Decently, sir!" reiterated the judge. "That doesn't express it, sir. You conducted yourself throughout with a dignity and polish as to the manner born!"

Crockett gave a whoop. "Put that down in writing, judge!" he exclaimed. "Draw it up in reg'lar black and white, as they do resolutions, sayin' just how I behaved at that big dinner. Then sign it, and have those eminent friends of yours sign it too. I want it as proof that I kin be a gentleman under pressure, judge—that I ain't always the unlicked riproarer they've mostly credited me with bein'. Will you judge?"

"I will, and with the utmost pleasure, Mr. Crockett," replied Judge Bowen, with difficulty controlling himself despite the drollery of the situation. "Call to-morrow, and I will have the document duly drawn up and signed."

Greatly elated, Crockett called on the following day, and got the coveted document. The contents were everything he could desire, and appended to it were a dozen or more distinguished signatures. For a long time afterwards he was very fond of exhibiting the paper, especially to such ladies at whose houses he imagined he had most glaringly misconducted himself. He also, upon his return to Tennessee, displayed it with great pride to many of his constituents, and the paper became known as "the Hon. David Crockett's credentials."

Notice of Final Settlement.

In the matter of the estate of Charles Ayer, deceased.—Notice is hereby given, that on Monday, the 25th day of January, A. D. 1884, being one of the regular days of the January term of the county court of El Paso county, in the state of Colorado, I, Caroline M. Ayer, administratrix of said estate, will appear before the judge of said court, present my final settlement as such administratrix, pray the approval of the same, and will then apply to be discharged as such administratrix. At which time and place any person in interest may appear and present objections to the same, if any there be.

Summons.

STATE OF COLORADO, County of El Paso. } ss
In the county court of said county, in the state of Colorado.
Mary S. Morley, Plaintiff, Against Joseph F. Morley, Defendant.
The People of the State of Colorado send Greeting:

To Joseph F. Morley, defendant, above named
You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named plaintiff in the county court of the county of El Paso, state of Colorado and to answer the complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after service on you of this summons, if served within this county; or if served out of this county, but in this district, within twenty days, otherwise within forty days, or judgment by default will be taken against you, according to the prayer of the complaint.

The said action is brought to procure a decree of this court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, on the ground that on or about the first day of January, 1883, defendant, without any reasonable cause, deserted and abandoned plaintiff, and still continues so to desert and abandon plaintiff and to live separate and apart from her, without her consent and against her will, as will more fully appear by the complaint on file herein, to which reference is here made.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

Given under my hand and the seal of the county court of the county of El Paso, state of Colorado, at Colorado Springs, this 8th day of January, A. D. 1884. EDWARD F. WRIGHT, Clerk.

Judging from the numerous favorable notices given Frank Mayo, who appears at the opera house in Davy Crockett next Monday evening, we are confident that he is fully worthy of support from our citizens, Says the Galveston News By long odds the largest house that has been played to this season was that which greeted Frank Mayo last night, when he gave Davy Crockett The performance was a pleasant surprise to many There were those who expected to see a blood and thunder business, but instead, they were treated to a presentation of the character that was like unto that which the Texan born boy has had of the hero of the Alamo It was simply the story of the honest backwoodsman, told on the stage, and well told The name of Davy Crockett is a dear one to the old Texans, and they would not like to have it dishonored It was not dishonored by Mr Mayo, and his company was good"

There was a large attendance at the concert given under the auspices of the Sunday school at the M E church last evening The programme with one exception was rendered as heretofore announced. Some of the exercises were of special merit The quartette by Misses Walker and Smith, and Messrs Shields and Hemenway was exceedingly well rendered, and deserved the encore it received The same can also be said in regard to the quartette by the church choir, which also responded to an encore The recitations by Misses Dixon, Johnson and Gunnell were delivered in a pleasing manner Miss May Gunnell appeared for the first time before an audience in Colorado Springs last evening She recited a selection entitled "Nothing to Wear," in a manner highly creditable to her The selections of Barnes' orchestra were also well rendered and favorably received It is to be regretted that Mrs Thayer was unable to be present, as many of those who attended were desirous of hearing her

Chapter on Guatemala, and a Complete English-Speaking Vocabulary

By ALFRED B. CONKLING,

Member of the New York Academy of Sciences, and formerly United States Geologist

Letter from Gen. Grant.

NEW YORK CITY, Dec. 3, 1883.

Dear Sir—I have read over the advance sheets of your excellent "Guide Book to Mexico" with great pleasure It supplies a want now for the first time being felt Mexico, with all her resources of soil, climate, and mines, has not attracted much of the attention of people of other lands until within the last three or four years Now, with the rapid strides she is making and is destined to make—toward a commercial prosperity rarely equaled by any nation in the past, travel to that country will increase many fold, and your book will give the traveler the information he wants Information is wonderfully condensed in it, and I wonder at its completeness in so little space

Very truly yours U S GRANT
